Presentation

1. Helen Humphreys, City of Kingston poet laureate, presented the following poem in recognition of national poetry month:

Prayer

Nothing holds its truth for long enough.
Not our words, or our desires, our small fidelities
to our small fires – what we have loved on this earth and in one another.
By the time the light at the window can be named it has already shifted. Words collapse. The place is in ruins.
Love spools out to vapour.
Home leaves us, not the other way around.
We don't reside. We just touch down.

Presentation (continued)

But what was once true remains so, and although we must leave everything, it is possible to return to what was sanctuary – to enter the building, or the concert hall, or the act of love – to see again the field of bright flowers – to open the book. It is possible to return to what was sanctuary, and find our shelter there.

Whereas the Federal Government and the Bank of Canada have issued a request for nominations of a woman to be honored on the face of their new bank notes; and

Whereas Molly Brant, also known as Koñwatsi-tsiyaiéñni is a generally unrecognized Canadian Heroine; and

Whereas she was famous in her own right, and played an important role in both Native and British culture in Kingston Ontario during the Loyalist period; and

Whereas through the early part of the American Revolution, Molly Brant sheltered and fed loyalists and sent arms and ammunition to those who were fighting for the King; and

Whereas Molly Brant was expected to use her influence over the Mohawk warriors as she was in a position to use the colonial administration to increase her political power to promote the interests of her people; and

Whereas after the war no provisions had been made for the Iroquois in the Treaty of Paris of 1783 and it has been suggested that Molly Brant used her influence on behalf of her people at this time to have land on the Bay of Quinte granted to the Iroquois; and

Whereas it was decided in 1783 that Cataraqui would be a good place for the settlement of the Loyalists and at which time Molly Brant decided to settle at Cataraqui at which time she was assigned Farm Lot A in Kingston Township; and

Whereas sadly on April 16, 1796 Molly Brant, a true Canadian Heroine died and was laid to rest in the burial grounds of St. George's Church, located at what became the corner of Queen Street and Montreal Street where St. Paul's Church
