That the amending by-law be given all three readings; and

That the Citizen Committee to Review Council Remuneration having fulfilled its mandate, be and is hereby disbanded.

BACKGROUND

On June 20, 2017, Council approved a recommendation that saw the formation of a Citizen Committee to Review Council Remuneration. This Committee's mandate was to review the current compensation paid to Members of Council using both data from comparator municipalities and an informed open-ended examination of the demands and workload of the Mayor and District Councillors. The Committee was comprised of the following members and their respective sectors:

Nick Waterfield, Chair, representing the business community

Suche James, Vice Chair, representing the Community-at-large

Sandra Carlton, representing the healthcare community

Bhavana Varma, representing the non-profit sector

Paul K Chan, representing the educational community

Joan Jardin, representing the organized labour community

Shelby Gargaro, representing the Community-at-large

Leonore Foster, being a former Council Member who was elected to Council after November 2006

Within that recommendation, Council also approved a list of criteria when establishing the Committee's comparator municipalities. Through those criteria, the following municipalities were chosen as the City's comparator municipalities:

- City of Barrie
- City of Brantford
- Municipality of Chatham-Kent
- City of Guelph
- City of Sudbury
- City of Thunder Bay

Each of these municipalities fits the criteria of utilizing the Standing Committee or the Committee of the Whole model of governance; is similar in size in terms of population; operates as a single tier municipality; has Councillors who are elected by districts/wards (the exception being Thunder Bay); and whose members of Council are considered to be part-time.

The Committee noted that, similar to other municipalities in Ontario and other provinces, the City of Kingston chose the Citizen Committee to Review Council Remuneration as an independent panel comprised of community representatives in an effort to make impartial recommendations on councillors' compensation and related matters. This marks the third time such a Committee has been struck to make recommendations for an incoming council, the most recent Committee delivering its recommendations in 2013.

The Committee that Council established includes a very talented and diverse group of individuals. Their personal knowledge and understanding of the roles and responsibilities of elected municipal representatives varied widely. One member sat on the previous Committee and was able to provide some memory and insight. Seven members were new to the challenge.

The Committee was tasked with recommending a remuneration level and had at its disposal the reports from 2009 and 2013. Members quickly appreciated the complexity of Council members' responsibilities including the self-defined elements of the roles assumed by elected representatives. And, although the previous two Committees had been restricted by their mandates to research and present remuneration levels based on comparator municipalities only, this Committee was also granted the freedom to explore the demands placed and workloads assumed by the Mayor and District Councillors in today's world and make recommendations influenced by these observations.

ANALYSIS

Methodology

The Committee focused its discussion on the issue in a rational and objective manner to make recommendations based on the guiding principles of transparency and openness, accountability and reasonableness, and appropriateness. These guiding principles from 2013 are repeated below:

- The compensation provided to Members of Council must be as transparent as possible. There should be no hidden employment benefits or convoluted formulas for establishing or adjusting same. By ensuring that the Councillors' remuneration is as transparent as possible, this information should be available to the citizens of Kingston in a comprehensive, yet understandable, format.
- In adopting a theme emphasized by the Provincial Government with the enactment of the Municipal Act, 2001, Members of Council must be held accountable for the expenditures of all public monies, including the establishment of, or adjustments to, their own compensation. In addition to the annual disclosure statement of Councillors' remuneration required by Section 284 of the Municipal Act, 2001, Councillors must also be held accountable for the way in which their compensation package is established and adjusted from time to time.
- The compensation paid to Members of Council should be appropriate to reflect the demanding nature and responsibilities of that public office in order to attract and retain capable candidates and should take into consideration available data from the most recent census about income levels in the Kingston area; however, such compensation must also be reasonable to both Councillors and to the citizens of Kingston.

In addition to these guiding principles, the Committee endorsed the following parameters to further guide its methodology:

- Members of Council should not be out-of-pocket to perform the duties of their office.
- The level of compensation must reflect both the public expectations of the jobs of Mayor and Councillor, as well as the statutory responsibilities and other duties of the public office.
- The amount of compensation for Members of Council, as well as the method to determine same, can influence the ability to attract good candidates to local government.
- Compensation for Members of Council should be established and adjusted from time to time through an arm's-length process to avoid any appearance of conflict of interest and to ensure the maintenance of a fair rate of compensation. Although sitting councils may opt to reject annual CPI increases, the starting remuneration for each incoming Council must be reviewed.

The Citizen Committee to Review Council Remuneration met on nine occasions. Some meetings focused on comparator municipalities and methodology established by previous Committees and other meetings focused on two open ended questions: “What are the current roles and responsibilities of Members of Council?” and “What would a fair level of compensation for an individual in that role be?”

To undertake the review of comparator municipalities, the Committee received a report from the City Clerk’s Department providing comparator municipalities’ salaries and benefits, population, census and income data. After examination, four options for Council remuneration were identified:

- Average Remuneration – The simple average of the six municipalities (total of all six divided by six)
- Median – The median of the six municipalities (the average of the two remunerations in the middle of the list of six)
- Cost per Person – The cost per person of each comparator municipality, averaged, and then applied to Kingston’s population of 123,798 (2016 census data) (remuneration divided by the population for each comparator municipality; these six costs per person averaged; this averaged cost per person applied to Kingston’s population)
- Cost per Member of Council – The total compensation paid for councillors was established by multiplying the compensation per councillor by the number of councillors for each comparator municipality. The average cost per council member was determined by dividing the total compensation by the total number of council members.

(These are the same options identified in 2013.)

This analysis confirmed that the City of Kingston is approximately at the median.

To review based on current demands and workload of the Mayor and District Councillors, the Committee:

- Circulated a questionnaire to the current Mayor and District Councillors to gain an understanding of the demands, roles and responsibilities to Council placed on them, and to gather each members’ observations on compensation;

- Discussed the results of individual meetings with a number of councillors who individually met with a small group of Committee members serving as a discussion panel. All councillors were invited to participate and nine meetings were held to further the Committees awareness of the complexities of the role.
- Engaged Mr. Rob Wood of 8020Info Inc to lead the Committee through a facilitated session in an effort to crystallize responses to the points being considered in determining fair compensation.

COMMITTEE OBSERVATIONS AND CONCLUSIONS

1. The roles of Mayor and District Councillor are and should remain part-time notwithstanding their responsibility for the annual spending of over $378 million. Classifying these roles as full-time would eliminate a large segment of the Kingston population from putting their names forward for office as their current employers would not permit them to have another “full-time job”.
2. The Committee is aware of the legislative revisions regarding the one third tax free portion of elected members’ remuneration. The Committee has received much guidance on the financial impact of the removal of this provision. The Committee has made recommendations that take this into consideration.
3. The Committee is aware of the statutory demands of meeting attendance. It is also aware of the ongoing challenges of balanced division of workloads on Standing Committees and the struggles to fill these seats. However, it also received information from the City Clerk’s Department about the strides made over the last few years in rationalizing the number of committees, the frequency of meetings and the average length of meetings. It is the Committee’s view that its role is to suggest appropriate compensation based on “best practises” of current and past elected officials. It is the elected body’s responsibility to ensure that committee workload is distributed appropriately.
4. The Committee was made aware of how social media can consume an elected members’ time. The demands of social media and the cost paid to one’s reputation if one is not constantly on top of issues are seen as a major change impacting elected officials and their work/life balance.
5. The current arrangements to assist elected members are, for the most part, satisfactory. There is a strong belief that as an elected official, the individual has to be the point person when contacted despite the City having in place policies and procedures for dealing with citizen issues. It was observed that there is more support available than is asked for, which can be addressed by further education. The Committee has confirmed that there is no demand for administrative assistance.

6. Remuneration is not the main appeal or enticement in running for Council supporting the adage that one “shouldn't be doing it for the money”. That said, remuneration is a factor considered by those putting their names forward for elected office. The role has evolved from that of a “civic honour and privilege” doable only by those with independent financial means to a four-year commitment with a measurable impact on one's life. To appeal to the broadest segment of interested candidates, remuneration must be seen as acceptable by individuals at varied stages of their income earning years.
7. The Deputy Mayor position requires additional remuneration to adequately compensate the individual fulfilling these responsibilities.

Finally, the Committee recognizes and thanks the City Clerk's Department, the Chief Financial Officer and the Human Resources and Organization Development Department for their invaluable guidance and patience. Their professionalism and diligence was essential in seeing this Committee through the process.

Citizen Committee to Review Council Remuneration

Summary Notes on Facilitated Discussion— Dec. 18th, 2017

Building Consensus on Council Remuneration:

The facilitated part of the discussion was based on a structured series of 15 statements related to key decision factors, underlying assumptions or potential approaches/options that had emerged through the committee's prior deliberations. (The specific statements are listed on the next page.)

Using interactive response technology (anonymous "clicker voting"), the committee was able to both establish points of common agreement and also identify points where different perspectives needed to be considered. The process helped thoughtful discussion emerge, allowing for the exploration of many factors involved in assessing both the role and also the potential remuneration for our elected officials.

This structured approach helped frame parameters for:

- Principles to guide development of final recommendations
- Clarification of the kind of "work" and level of effort expected in these roles
- Expectations around compensation, expenses, support and related issues
- Comparators for assessing and making judgements/recommendations.

A high degree of consensus was established around several key points, setting the stage for future development of specific recommendation(s) on the questions of fair and appropriate Council Remuneration.

It was a pleasure to be of service.

Planning Assumptions — Agree or Disagree?

- 1) The opportunity to seek municipal office should be accessible to all citizens, regardless of their employment, economic or family circumstances.
- 2) Remuneration should not be the main appeal or enticement in running for Council — “you shouldn’t do it for the money”.
- 3) There are no definitive benchmarks or comparators for estimating fair compensation for the role, responsibilities & expected workload of councillors.
- 4) Remuneration should be compared not only to levels paid by other cities but also other benchmarks from the private, public and non-profit sectors.
- 5) The workload for Council members has increased significantly in recent years, due to growing scope of City work, public consultations & social media interaction.
- 6) Council remuneration should be based on the expectation that councillors are filling a “part-time” role, not a “full-time” position.
- 7) Despite many gray areas, councillor remuneration is meant to reflect their decision-making and functional roles in government, not political activities.
- 8) While councillors may invest any amount of time in their roles, a minimum expectation is about 20-25 hours/week spent on core functions (meetings).
- 9) Because standard workloads vary from committee to committee, time demands should be balanced across Council (not just number of appointments).
- 10) To be effective in their roles, councillors require an increase in support for their own research, beyond what city staff already provides to Council.
- 11) Councillors should be paid a simple lump sum to cover their expenses, as opposed to a reimbursement system that involves processing receipts.
- 12) Remuneration for councillors should be increased to compensate for the loss of their current tax exemption (1/3 of remuneration treated as expenses).
- 13) Aside from any tax adjustments, recommending an increase in remuneration of more than ~20% is not realistic in terms of what the public would view as acceptable.
- 14) The relative difference in remuneration for the Mayor compared to Council members fairly reflects the additional duties and responsibilities (~3:1 ratio).
- 15) Adjustments to standard remuneration and expenses should apply for additional duties/costs (serving as Deputy Mayor; mileage for larger district).
